Abstract

The Ancient Egyptian Language is rich of terms and expressions. nhy or * nhi* was among these terms. The word nhy probably comes from the verb * nhi* which means to pray, wish, covet.

The aim of this paper is to deal with * nhi* or nhy in the religious' texts. It will provide an overview of the different writings and the meaning of the word. nhyl nhi presents the gods as it appeared between their names. It discusses the role and iconography of these gods in the Ancient Egyptian religion.

Throughout out the religious' texts, the term nhy appeared in the Pyramids texts, Coffin Texts, Book of the Dead, the Amduat, Litany of Ra, Book of the Day, and Book of the Night. It appeared in gods names such as * nhi, nhy*, and * nhi hr*.

Keywords: nhy, nhi hr, Religious Texts.

I. Introduction

The Ancient Egyptians believed in the afterlife and resurrection. They left a lot of texts revealing their rituals and believes. Nehy is mentioned in the religious texts concerning the afterlife.
This includes other gods who adopted the same appellation Nehy or Nehi. There were other gods who took the same meaning of Nehy as \( nh \) and \( nhy-\text{hr} \). These gods were included in this research.

The word \( nhy/ nh\) has different meanings such as favorite\(^1\), pray for\(^2\), Prayer\(^3\), divine petition\(^4\), supplicant, to ask, to request, to beseech\(^5\). In addition, the word \( nht \) means wish or confide\(^6\).

II. The Religious' Texts

II. 1. Pyramid Texts

In Pyramid Texts Nehy appeared in PT 301 (Pyr. 449 a, b (W))\(^7\):

Unis knows him and knows his name: Nehy is his name, his name Nehy is the lord of the year, with the victorious arm, Horus who is over the shd.w of the sky, who keeps Ra alive every day.

II.2 Coffin Texts

On the Sarcophagus of \textit{ntrw htp}\(^8\), Nehy appeared (CT 307)\(^9\). The texts as follows:

This version frequently appears on the papyri of the Twenty-second Dynasty. For the late period the best version of the Twelfth Division is in the Sarcophagus Room of the tomb of Pedemenopet: A. The previous table presents the different forms and meanings of the term Nehy. It shows that the most of the forms employed the determinative $Nh$ (Gardiner’s Sign-list G21)\(^{35}\) bird. Sometimes, it ends with the determinative of the god ($\text{	extcircled{Nh}}$, $\text{	extcircled{Nh}}$). Concerning the meaning, it is almost has the same meaning except a translation of Piankoff\(^{36}\) in the tomb of Ramses VI, he translated it as the beloved one. In addition, it was translated as the eternal one\(^{37}\), Guinea fowl\(^{38}\).

II. Nehy as a Deity

II.1.1 Iconography

Nehy as a god has different shapes as the following:

- In the 2\(^{nd}\) hour of the Amduat\(^{39}\), He is represented as a man with the year-sign ($rnpt$) in his hand while the other hanging. He is wearing a short kilt, long hair wig, and a curved false beard (Figs. 1: 3).

36 Piankoff, Ramesses VI, 391.

39 Richter, The Amduat, Fig. 14.
In the 12th hour of the Amduat, he is depicted between four deities carrying paddles (oars) on their hands and standing behind a fire-spitting serpent standing on her tail. He is shown as a man with two birds-head and wearing a short kilt and holding an oar in his two hands (Figs. 4: 6).

A representation of a scene at Philadelphia Museum (E 13621) shows Nehy as a square-headed bird with a short break with wattle at its throat. A uraeus-serpent and a sun disk are shown above her head. The bird has a human hand holding ṣnh sign (Fig. 7).

In the Litany of Ra, Nehy was depicted as mummified baboon-headed body (Fig. 8).

In the Book of the Day, he is shown as a man with two birds-head holding an oar (rudder) (Figs. 9, 10).

43 Piankoff, Le Livre du Jour, 15, pl. 1; Piankoff, Ramesses VI, Vol. II, Pl. 187; Müller-Roth, Das Buch vom Tage, 324-325.
- In the Book of the night\textsuperscript{44}, He was depicted as a man with long hair wig while his two hands with closing palms hanging beside his body (Figs. 11, 12).

III.2.2 His titles

Nehy as a Deity has one title \( nb \ rnp.wt \) (the lord of years), this title is mentioned in texts as follows:

- On a statue of Piay (\( Pi\breve{i}l\breve{i} \)) in the Egyptian Museum at Cairo (CG 553)\textsuperscript{45}, an offering formula (\( htp\ di\ nsw \)) is reads as follows:

\text{(nhii)\ } nb\ rnp.wt

“An offering that may Ptah give, the lord of the two lands, Nehy, the lord of years”.

- Another formula on the statue of Khaemwaset (son of Ramses II) in the Egyptian Museum at Cairo (CG 42147)\textsuperscript{46}, is read as follows:

\text{(nhii)\ } nb\ rnp.wt

\textsuperscript{44} Roulin, \textit{Le Livre du Jour}, Pl. XII.
“An offering that may Ptah-Tatenen give, Nehy, the lord of years”.

- On the Sarcophagus of Seseneb-nef from El-Lisht (Middle Kingdom), an inscription reads as follows\(^47\):

\text{bp\, bp\, bnh\, dt\, pw\, i\, rt\, bnh\, nb\, rnp\, wt\, s\, nh\, dt}

It is the ba, the ba of eternity, it is the uraeus.. It is Neheh the lord of years, who lives forever\(^48\).

III.2.3 The Attributes of Nehy

Throughout the religious' texts Nehy has different attributes as the following:

- The deceased knows him as the father of Shu and Tefnut and he keeps Ra alive every day (Pyr. 449a)

- Nehy was the name of the deceased (CT 307).

\(^{48}\) Her Nhy or Nnh was the same according to Sandman-Holmberg, The God Ptah, 178.
- The deceased begs him as a bull and he lament as the Ennead (BD 153b).

- In the Amduat, the 2\textsuperscript{nd} hour he is one of the gods whose present offering to the great god of the season. Furthermore, in the 12th hour he is one of the gods who struggle against apep (Apophis) in the east of the heaven.

- In the Litany of Ra, he has a flaming tongue and slays his enemies.

- In the Book of the Day, he is one of the gods who prepare the road for the god Ra.

III.2.4 Nehy with other Deities

Nehy took the same epithet \((nb \ rnp.wt, \text{the lord of years})\) of Ptah. In addition, Nehy was identified with other god as Sobek, in the corridor around the sanctuary at Edfu temple. The text is read as \(^{49}\):

\[\text{nhy m rn.f n sbk} \quad \text{Nehy is there, in his name Sobek.}\]

In the tomb of Sety I (the Litany of Ra), a text shows that Nehy is connected with Osiris. It is read as follows \(^{50}\):

\[^{49}\text{E. Chaissante, Le Temple de Edfu I (Paris, 1892), 330.}\]
\[^{50}\text{Hornung, Sonnenlitanei I, 204; Hornung, Sonnenlitanei II, 87.}\]
Indeed, you have raised me to that mysterious shrine that is hidden for Osiris-Nehy, the lord or years.

Nehy was connected with Ptah. The text at Hibis temple is showing that:

\[iw \text{ is.k rf s'r n.tn sw r hmn pw st3 imn n wsir nhy nb rnpwt}\]

The strong bull strikes the disaffected persons with his arm in front of Nehy Ptah in Thebes.

IV. Nehy in personal Ranks

Nehy in personal names is rare. It appeared twice on two stelae at the Egyptian Museum of Cairo. The stelae of Nehy-nefer dates back to the Middle Kingdom\(^5\). The second appearance was on a New Kingdom stelae of Nehy\(^6\).

\(^6\) CG 20258; H. Lange and H. Shafer, Grab- und Denkstein des Mittleren Reichs I, (Catalogue General), (Cairo, 1908), 277-278; H. Ranke, Die ägyptischen Personennamen I, (Glückstadt, 1935), 2070.

\(^7\) He was an infantry man (TR. 15.5.46.3); Porter and Moss, Topographical Bibliography of Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphic Texts,
V. Who is Nehy?

Some Pyramid Texts refer to Nehy as a manifestation of one of the Horus god (PT 301, Pyr. 449 b) who is in the sky, that he keeps Ra alive every day. Furthermore, Nehy appeared in a number of religious texts from the New Kingdom which leaves no doubt that it was a form of the sun god\(^{54}\). This suggestion is supported by two texts at Dendara temple. The first text is read as\(^ {55}\) \(\text{pt hrt nHH}\) the sky which bears Nehy. The other text is read\(^ {56}\) \(\text{m33 nHH m pt Nehy (Neheh) is seeing in the sky. It is clear that is the sun god which is spoken of.}\)

Sethe assumed that Nehy was Ptah, because he was the father of the god according to PT 301, and his epithet in the same spell was "the lord of years"\(^ {57}\). Sandman was not convinced with Sethe’s opinion because Nehy as the father of the god was not exclusively limited to Ptah\textsuperscript{58}.

Nehy took the same epithet (\textit{nb rnp.wt}, the lord of years) of Ptah but he was not\textsuperscript{59} Ptah, although Sethe\textsuperscript{60} pointed out that Nehy was Ptah. In addition, Ptah in the Ramesside period received the name as a loan from other gods. Furthermore, Nehy may be connected with Ptah as well as Osiris.

In the litany of Ra, Nehy was the corpse of the sun god. A text inscribed on the sarcophagus of Taho (CG 29305) read as follows\textsuperscript{61}:

\[\textit{\textit{twt is h3.t wsir N h3.t b3y (nhy)}}\]

You are indeed the corpse of Osiris N, the corpse of Bay\textsuperscript{62} (He-of-the Ba)/ Nehy\textsuperscript{63}.

\textsuperscript{62} Her $B\beta$-bird is used instead of $nh$-bird because in the late Period, it was used as substitute of it.
Furthermore, Nehy was one of the forms or the praised of the god Ra\textsuperscript{64}. He was depicted in the same form in the Litany of Ra\textsuperscript{65}.

VI. Concluding Remarks

- Nehy is translated as the petitioner, the eternal one, Guinea fowl, but the first one was the most popular. In addition, the petitioner is connected with the meaning of the verb \textit{nhi} as the pray is a supplication for the god.

- Nehy is written with different forms but the Guinea-fowl is more frequently used.

- Nehy was mentioned in the Religious' texts but from the New Kingdom it was depicted in scenes.

- Nehy is depicted as a man holding the sign of the year (Amduat), a man with two birds-head holding paddles (Amduat, Book of the Day), as a bird with a sun-disk and serpent above his head, mummified baboon-headed body (Litany of Ra), and as a man with his hands hanging (book of the night).

- He took the epithet of Ptah but he was not Ptah, he was connected with Ptah as well as Osiris.

- He was a primarily name for one of the Horus god or for the sun (as the texts mentioned in addition to the appearance of the sun disk in his name).

- Nehy was one of the primitive gods because he keeps Ra alive, preparing the road for Ra, lament as the Ennead, connected with Ptah and Osiris, slaying enemies, and connected with htp di nsw formula.
